

GRAMERCY EMERGING MARKETS DEBT FUND

MONTHLY COMMENTARY

In October, risk sentiment for fixed income turned negative as the narrative on the prospects for the U.S. election changed and the market started pricing in a higher likelihood of a Trump victory. Given the inflationary nature of Trump's platform – increased tariffs, tax cuts, lower supply of labor through immigration reform, etc. – the 10-year U.S. Treasury widened by 50 basis points (bps) in October. The size of this move, in the month preceding a 50bps interest rate cut by the Federal Reserve, was not expected by the market, even if economic data releases were also coming in stronger than expected.

In terms of return streams, all Emerging Markets (EM) fixed income sub asset classes were impacted by the changing U.S. election narrative and the rise in U.S. Treasury yields during the month of October. EM local currency sovereigns, as represented by the GBI-EM Global Diversified Index, underperformed, with a total return of -4.61% during the month, giving back a little over half of the gains registered during third quarter. EM hard currency sovereigns, as represented by the EMBI Global Diversified index, and EM hard currency corporates, as represented by the CEMBI Broad Diversified Index, returned -1.72% and -0.86%, respectively in October. As expected, given the significant move in rates and the longer duration aspect of the investment grade components of both hard currency sovereigns and corporates, investment grade underperformed high yield by 250bps in hard currency sovereigns and 110bps in hard currency corporates.

During the month of October, performance benefitted from our underweight allocation to the EM local currency sovereign sub asset class, which was negatively impacted by a stronger dollar in the wake of higher expectations of a Trump victory and an increase in global tariffs. Our lack of exposure to low beta local currency assets, such as Malaysia and Indonesia, for example, was particularly helpful this month. The portfolio also benefited from our tactical exposure to a select group of low dollar price China property bonds that rallied on the back of constructive October sales data and continued efforts by the Chinese government to stimulate the economy. These factors were partially offset by the Fund's positioning in longer duration hard currency corporate bonds in the Middle East that were negatively impacted by the rise in U.S. Treasury yields during the month.

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES

Before investing you should carefully consider the Fund's investment objectives, risks, charges and expenses. This and other information about the Fund is in the prospectus and summary prospectus, a copy of which may be obtained by calling 800-207-7108 or by visiting the Fund's website at www.libertystreetfunds.com. Please read the Fund's prospectus or summary prospectus carefully before investing.

An investment in the Fund is subject to risk, including the possible loss of principal amount invested and including, but not limited to, the following risks, which are more fully described in the prospectus: Market Risk: the market price of a security may decline, sometimes rapidly or unpredictably, due to general market conditions that are not specifically related to a particular issuer, company, or asset class. Fixed income/interest rate: generally, fixed income securities decrease in value if interest rates rise, and increase in value if interest rates fall. Foreign Investment: the prices of foreign securities may be more volatile than the prices of securities of U.S. issuers because of economic and social conditions abroad, political developments, changes in the regulatory environments of foreign countries, and changes in U.S. laws regarding such countries. Emerging Markets: many of the risks with respect to foreign investments are more pronounced for investments in issuers in developing or emerging market countries. Emerging market countries tend to have more government exchange controls, more volatile interest and currency exchange rates, less market regulation, and less developed and less stable economic, political and legal systems than those of more developed countries. High Yield ("Junk") bond: involve greater risk of default, downgrade, or price declines, can be more volatile and less liquid than investment-grade securities. Credit: if an issuer or guarantor of a debt security held by the Fund or a counterparty to a financial contract with the Fund defaults or is downgraded or is perceived to be less creditworthy, the value of the Fund's portfolio will typically decline. Convertible Securities: are subject to market and interest rate risk and credit risk. Contingent Convertible Securities: subject to the risk of a triggering event occurring which may result in the issuer converting the security to an equity interest, cancelling interest payments, or writing down the principal value of such securities, and are inherently risky because of the difficulty of predicting triggering events. Foreign Sovereign Debt: Foreign governments rely on taxes and other revenue sources to pay interest and principal on their debt obligations. The payment of principal and interest on these obligations may be adversely affected by a variety of factors. Currency Risk: the values of investments in securities denominated in foreign currencies increase or decrease as the rates of exchange between those currencies and the U.S. dollar change. Currency conversion costs and currency fluctuations could erase investment gains or add to investment losses. Prepayment or Call Risk: if interest rates fall, an issuer may exercise the right to prepay their securities, and the Fund will not benefit from the rise in market price that normally accompanies a decline in interest rates. The Fund may also lose any premium it paid on the security. ESG Criteria: the Fund's consideration of ESG criteria in making its investment decisions may affect the Fund's exposure to risks associated with certain issuers; the criteria can result in excluding securities of certain issuers; there are significant differences in interpretations of what it means for a company to have positive or negative ESG characteristics. Inflation: risk that as inflation increases, the real value of the Fund's assets can decline. This risk is greater for fixed-income instruments with longer maturities. Derivatives: Using derivatives exposes the Fund to additional or heightened risks, including leverage risk, liquidity risk, valuation risk, market risk, counterparty risk, and credit risk. Liquidity: the Fund may not be able to sell some or all of the investments that it holds due to a lack of demand in the marketplace or it may only be able to sell those investments at a loss. Liquid investments may become illiquid or less liquid after purchase by the Fund, illiquid investments may be harder to value, especially in changing markets. Valuation: the sales price the Fund could receive for any particular portfolio investment may differ from the Fund's valuation of the investment, particularly for securities that trade in thin or volatile markets or that are valued by the Adviser using a fair value methodology. This may affect purchase price or redemption proceeds for investors who purchase or redeem Fund shares on days when the Fund is pricing or holding fair-valued securities. The value of foreign securities, certain fixed income securities, and currencies may be materially affected by events after the close of the market on which they are valued but before the Fund determines its net asset value. Portfolio Turnover Risk: active and frequent trading of the Fund's portfolio securities may lead to higher transaction costs and could negatively affect the Fund's performance. No Operating History: The Fund is recently organized and has no operating history. As a result, prospective investors have no track record or history on which to base their investment decisions. Management and Strategy Risk: the evaluation and selection of the Fund's investments depend on the judgment of the Fund's Sub-Adviser, which may prove to be incorrect. Recent Market Event: periods of market volatility may occur in response to market events and other economic, political, and global macro factors, and could adversely affect the value and liquidity of the Fund's investments.

The JPM Emerging Market Bond Index Global Diversified (EMBI Global Diversified) is a uniquely weighted USD-denominated emerging markets sovereign index.
